DAILY PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 25, 1834.

MR. WEBSTER'S SPEECH.—We publish, to day, this gentleman's remarks upon presenting a memorial, from Boston, with a faint glimmering of hope that his plan of a Bank may be acceptable.

Our remarks upon Judge Wilkins' toast have drawn out a paragraph, in reply, from (the vile spaniel of the Mercury, as we would call him, if we were not unwilling to do that animal injustice, by the comparison,) the editor of the Mercury.

In the various chameleon like changes of that unprincipled paper, none seems to us more striking than its present zeal in the cause of Judge Wilkins. In the campaign which preceded the election of our Senator to Congress, that paper was the selected sewer through which all kinds of filth was poured upon the devoted head of "our present distinguished Senator." Low, and disgusting, and vile, and abominable, as that paper has been, during the last four or five years, its conduct in relation to our "present distinguished Senator" was then supereminently base and infamous. Every charge that could be raked up from the filthiest kennels, were freely, nay cheerfully, belched forth from the office of the Pittsburgh Mercury. The more vile and abominable the charge, the more keen the relish with which it was seized upon by the Jackalls that provided for that establishment, and vomited forth upon its half poisoned readers.

At that time, James S. Stevenson was in office—he had a hand on the keys of the Treasury, and his opponent was merely William Wilkins. Now, Mr. Stevenson is in his grave, and William Wilkins is "our distinguished Senator," and is shortly to have a hand in the public funds, which are so conveniently scattered to the four winds, and so lavishly wasted, upon printers.

This makes all the difference in the world to the editor of the Mercury—he will now plaster our Senator with praise as cheerfully and with as much heartlessness as he formerly did with calumnies.

We know not how William Wilkins viewed the calumnies formerly belched out from this laboratory of falsehoods and slanders—but we hazard nothing in expressing our opinion, that he secretly shrinks, with utter loathing, from its approbation. Ambition—the love of office—a desire for distinction, may somewhat have blunted the sensibility of his feelings; but, we are greatly mistaken, if he can suffer the infliction of the approbation of the Mercury, and of the demagogues around it, without a secret shuddering.

But, a s to the reply of the Mercury, we never asserted that "Mr. Wilkins now owed the Bank of the United States one dollar."—We know that, by a very favorable arrangement, he has paid every cent that he owed the Bank.

The following sentence requires some notice—

"Nor does it necessarily follow that because he has been a good customer to it, in "gratitude" he is to become its slave, and sacrifice the best interests of his country for its benefit."

The Bank and Mr. Wilkins were, we presume, reciprocally good customers—that Institution probably favored Mr. Wilkins quite as much as he favored the Bank—to calumniate the Bank was, therefore, to return "evil for good;" to be not only, (as we before said,) "an ingrate, but a libeller."

But this is a new doctrine of the Mercury—the common slang of that paper, when applied to a friend of the Bank, is, "Oh, he borrowed money from the Bank, and he is bought!" but, when applied to Judge Wilkins, he is a "good customer."

If Mr. Clay should happen to be in debt to the Bank, (which he is not) he would be considered as "bought," but Mr. Wilkins is a "good customer." It is all right, and fair, and innocent, that Senator Wilkins should borrow money from the Bank; but all wrong that Senator Clay should do the same thing. Such is the consistency of the Mercury.

CONGRESS.

Monday, Jan. 20, 1834.—In Senate, Mr. Webster said, he rose to give notice that circumstances existed which would prevent his moving to go into the consideration of Executive business to day. He would, however, make a motion to that effect to morrow. While up, he would take that opportunity to correct an unfounded statement, which had appeared in a morning paper of this city, respecting business said to be pending before the Senate—a statement, he said, unfounded both in law and in fact. The Government Directors of the Bank of the United States, he said, were still in office, and would hold over their appointments until new ones were made.

Mr. Webster then presented to the Senate a series of Resolutions, adopted at a numerous meeting of the citizens of Boston, without distinction of party, held at Faneuil Hall, to consider the state of the Currency and Finances of the country.

[The Resolutions at large will be given hereafter.]

The Resolutions having been read—

Mr. Webster said, he wished to bear unequivocal and decided testimony to the respectability, intelligence, and disinterestedness, of the long list of gentlemen, at whose instance this meeting was assembled. The meeting, said Mr. Webster, was connected with no party purpose whatever: It had an object more sober, more cogent, more interesting to the whole community, than mere party questions. The Senate will perceive, in the tone of these resolutions, no intention to exaggerate or inflame; no disposition to get up excitement or to spread alarm. I hope the restrained and serious manner, the moderation of temper, and the exemplary candor of these resolutions, in connection with the plain truths which they contain, will give them just weight with the Senate. I assure you, sir, the members composing this meeting were neither capitalists, nor speculators, nor alarmists. They are merchants, traders, mechanics, artisans, and others engaged in the active business of life. They are of the muscular portion of society; and they desire to lay before Congress an evil which they feel to press sorely on their occupations, their earnings, their labor, and their property; and to express their conscientious conviction of the causes of that evil. If intelligence, if pure intention, if deep and wide spread connection with business, in its various branches, if through practical knowledge and experience—if inseparable union between their own prosperity and the prosperity of the whole country, authorize men to speak, and give them a right to be heard, the sentiments of this meeting ought to make an impression. For one, sir, I entirely concur in all their opinions. I adopt their fourteen first resolutions, without alteration or qualification, as setting forth truly the present state of things, stating truly its causes, and pointing to the true remedy.

Mr. President, now that I am speaking, I will use the opportunity to say a few words, which I intended to say, in the course of the morning, on the coming up of the resolution which now lies on the table; but which is as applicable to this occasion, as to that.

An opportunity may, perhaps, be hereafter afforded me, of discussing the reasons given by the Secretary for the very important measure, adopted by him, in removing the deposits. But as I know not how near that time may be, I desire, in the mean while, to make my opinions known, without reserve, on the present state of the country. Without intending to discuss any thing at present, I feel it my duty, nevertheless, to let my sentiments and my convictions be understood. In the first place, then, sir, I agree with those who think that there is a severe pressure in the money market, and very serious embarrassment felt in all branches of the national industry. I think this is not local, but general; general, at least, over every part of the country, where the cause has as yet began to operate, and sure to become, not only general, but universal, as the operation of the cause shall spread. If proofs were wanted, in addition to all that is told us by those who know, the high rate of interest, now at 12 per cent., or higher, where it was hardly 6, last September—the depression of all stocks, some ten, some twenty, some thirty per cent—and the low prices of commodities, are proofs abundantly sufficient to show the existence of the pressure. But, sir, labor—that most extensive of all interests—American manuel labor—feels, or will feel, the shock more sensibly, far more sensibly, than capital or property of any kind. Public works have stopped, or must stop; great private undertakings, employing many hands, have ceased, and others must cease. A great lowering of the rates of wages, as well as a depreciation of property, is the inevitable consequence of causes now in full operation. Serious embarrassments in all branches of business do certainly exist.

I am of opinion, therefore, that there is, undoubtedly, a very severe pressure on the community, which Congress ought to relieve if it can; and that this pressure is not an instance of the ordinary reaction, or the ebbing and flowing of commercial affairs; but is an extraordinary case, produced by an extraordinary cause.

In the next place, sir, I agree entirely with the 11th Boston resolution, as to the causes of this embarrassment. We were in a state of high prosperity, commercial and agricultural. Every branch of business, and especially manufacturing, was pushed far, and the credit, as well as the capital of the country employed to near its utmost limits. In this state of things, some degree of overtrading doubtless took place, which, however, if nothing else had occurred, would have been seasonably corrected by the ordinary and necessary operation of things. But, on this palmy state of things, the late measure of the Secretary fell, and has acted on it with powerful and lamentable effect.

And I think, sir, that such a cause is entirely adequate to produce the effect; that it is wholly natural; and that it ought to have been foreseen that it would produce such effect. Those must have looked at the surface of things only, as it seems to me, who thought otherwise; and who expected that such an operation could be gone thro' with, without producing a very serious shock.

The Treasury, in a very short time, has withdrawn from the Bank 8,000,000 dollars, within a fraction. This call, of course, the Bank has been obliged to provide for, and could not provide for without more or less inconvenience to the public. The mere withdrawing of so large a sum from hands actually holding and using it, and the transferring of it, through the Bank collecting, and through another Bank loaning it, if it can loan it, into other hands, is, itself, an operation, which, if conducted suddenly, must produce considerable inconvenience. And this is all that the Secretary seems to have anticipated. But this is not the one hundredth part of the whole evil. The great evil arises from the new attitude in which the Government places itself towards the Bank. Every thing is in a false position. The Government, the Bank of the U. S., the State Banks, are all out of place. They are deranged, and separated, and jostling against each other. Instead of amity, reliance, and mutual succor, relations of jealousy, of distrust, of hostility even, are springing up between these parties. All act on the defensive—each looks out for itself;—and the public interest is crushed between the upper and the nether millstone. All this should have been foreseen. It is idle to say that these evils might have been prevented by the Bank, if it had exerted itself to prevent them.—That is mere matter of opinion; it may be true, or it may not: but it was the business of those who proposed the removal of the Deposits, to ask themselves how it was probable the Bank would act, when they should attack it, assail its credit, and allege the violation by it of its charter; and thus compel it to take an attitude, at least, of stern defence. The community have certainly a right to hold those answerable, who have unnecessarily got into this quarrel with the Bank, and thereby occasioned the evil, let the conduct of the Bank, in the course of the controversy, be what it may.

In my opinion, sir, the great source of the evil is the shock which the measure has given to confidence in the commercial world. The credit of the whole system of the currency of the country seems shaken. The State Banks have lost credit, and lost confidence. They have suffered vastly more than the Bank of the United States itself, at which the blow was aimed.

The derangement of internal exchanges is one of the most disastrous consequences of the measure. By the origin of its charter, by its unquestioned solidity, by the fact that it was at home every where, and in perfect credit every where, the Bank of the United States accomplished the internal exchanges of the country with vast facility, and at an unprecedented cheap rate. The State banks can never accomplish this; for the reason given in the Boston Resolution, they cannot act with the same concert, the same identity of purpose. Look at the Prices Current, and see the change in the value of the notes of distant banks in the great cities. Look at the depression of the stocks of the State banks, deposit banks, and all. Look at what must happen the moment the Bank of the U. States, in its process of winding up, or to meet any other crisis, shall cease to buy domestic bills, especially in the Southern, Southwestern, and Western markets. Can any man doubt what would be the state of exchange when that takes place? or can any one doubt its necessary effect on the price of produce? The Bank has purchased bills to the amount of sixty millions a year, as appears by documents, heretofore laid before the Senate. A great portion of these, no doubt was purchased in the South and West, against shipments of the great staples of these quarters of the country. When the Bank shall cease to buy, as it must cease, consequences cannot but be felt, much severer even than these now experienced. This is inevitable. But, sir, I go no farther into particular statements. My opinion, I repeat, is that the present distress is immediately occasioned, beyond all doubt, by the removal of the deposits; and that just such consequences might have been, and ought to have been foreseen from that measure, as we do now perceive and feel around us.

Sir, I do not believe, nevertheless, that these consequences were foreseen. With such foresight, the deposits, I think, would not have been touched. The measure has operated more deeply and more widely, than was expected. We all may find proof of this, in the conversations of every hour. No one, who seeks to acquaint himself with the opinions of men, in and out of Congress, can doubt that, if the act were now to be done, it would receive every little encouragement or support.

Being of opinion that the removal of the deposits has produced the pressure, as its immediate effect, not so much by withdrawing a large sum of money, as by alarming the confidence of the community, by breaking in on the well adjusted relations of the Government and the Bank, I agree again, with the Boston Resolutions, that the natural remedy is a restoration of the relation in which the Bank has heretofore stood to Government.

I agree, sir, that this question ought to be settled, and to be settled soon. And yet, if it be decided that the present state of things shall exist—if it be the determination of Congress to do nothing in order to put an end to the unnatural, distrustful, half belligerent, present condition of the Government and the Bank, I do not look for any great relief to the community, or any early quieting of the public agitation. On the contrary, I expect increased difficulty, and increased disquiet.

The public moneys are now out of the Bank of the United States. There is no law regulating their custody, or fixing their place. They are at the disposal of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be kept where he pleases, as he pleases, and the places of their custody to be changed as often as he pleases.

Now, sir, I do not think this is a state of things in which the country is likely to acquiesce.

Mr. President, the restoration of the deposits is a question distinct and by itself. It does not necessarily involve any other question. It stands clear of all controversy and all opinion about rechartering the Bank, or creating any new Bank.

But I wish, nevertheless, sir, to say a few words of a bearing somewhat beyond that question. Being of opinion that the country is not likely to be satisfied with the present state of things, I have looked earnestly for the suggestion of some prospective measure—some system to be adopted as the future policy of the country. Where are the public moneys hereafter to be kept? In what currency is the revenue of the country hereafter to be collected? What is to take the place of the Bank in our general currency system? How are we to preserve a uniform currency, a uniform measure of the value of property, and the value of labor, a uniform medium of exchange and of payments? How are we to exercise that salutary control over the national currency, which it was the unquestionable purpose of the Constitution to devolve on Congress?

These, sir, appear to me to be the momentous questions before us, and which we cannot long keep out of view. In this question, every man in the community, who either has a dollar, or expects to earn one, has a direct interest.

Now, sir, I have heard but four suggestions, or opinions, as to what may hereafter be expected or attempted.

The first is, that things will remain as they are—the Bank be left to expire, no new Bank created, and the whole subject be left under the control of the Executive Department.

I have already said, that I do not believe the country will acquiesce in this.

The second suggestion is that which was made by the honorable member from Virginia, (Mr. Rives.) That honorable member pledges himself to bring forward a proposition having for its object to do away with the paper system altogether, and to return to an entire metallic currency.

I do not expect, sir, that the honorable member will find much support in such an undertaking. A mere gold and silver currency, and the entire abolition of paper, is not suited to the times.—The idea has something a little too antique, too Spartan, in it; we might as well think of going to iron, at once. If such a result as the gentleman hopes for, were even desirable, I regard its attainment as utterly impracticable and hopeless. I lay that scheme, therefore, out of my contemplation.

There is, then, sir, the rechartering of the present Bank; and lastly, there is the establishment of a new Bank. The first of these received the sanction of the last Congress, but the measure was negatived by the President. The other, the creation of a new Bank, has not been brought forward in Congress, but has excited attention out of doors, and has been proposed in some of the State Legislatures. I observe, sir, that a proposition has been submitted for consideration, by a very intelligent gentleman, in the Legislature of Massachusetts, recommending the establishment of a new Bank, with the following provisions:

"1. The capital stock to be fifty millions of dollars.

"2. The Stockholders of the present U. States Bank to be permitted to subscribe an amount equal to the stock they now hold.

"3. The United States to be stockholders to the same extent they now are, and to appoint the same number of Directors.

"4. The subscription to the remaining fifteen millions, to be distributed to the several States, in proportion to federal numbers, or in some other just and equal ratio; the instalments payable either in cash or in funded stock of the State, bearing interest at 5 per cent.

"5. No Branch of the Bank to be established in any State, unless by permission of its Legislature.

"6. The Branches of the Bank, established in the several States, to be liable to taxation by those States, respectively, in the same manner, and to the same extent only with their own Banks.

"7. Such States as may become subscribers to the stock, to have the right of appointing a certain number, not exceeding one third, of the Directors in the Branch of their own State.

"8. Stock not subscribed for under the foregoing provisions, to be open to subscription by individual citizens."

A project, not altogether dissimilar, has been started in the Legislature of Pennsylvania. These proceedings show, at least, a conviction of the necessity of some Bank, created by Congress. Mr. President on this subject I have no doubt whatever. I think a National Bank proper and necessary. I believe it to be the only practicable remedy for the evils we feel, and the only effectual security against the greater evils which we fear. Not, sir, that there is any magic in the name of a Bank; nor that a National Bank works by any miracle, or mystery. But looking to the state of things actually existing around us—looking to the great number of State Banks already existing, not less than three hundred and fifty, or four hundred—looking to the vast amount of paper issued by those Banks; and considering that, in the very nature of things, this paper must be limited and local in its credit and in its circulation, I confess I see nothing but a well conducted National Institution, which is likely to afford any guard against excessive paper issues, or which can furnish a sound and uniform currency to every part of the United States. This, sir, is not only a question of finance, it not only respects the operations of the Treasury, but it rises to the character of a high political question. It respects the currency, the actual money, the measure of value of all property, and all labor, in the United States. If we needed not a dollar of money in the Treasury, it would still be our solemn and bounden duty to protect this great interest. It respects the exercise of one of the greatest powers, beyond all doubt, conferred on Congress by the constitution. And I hardly know any thing less consistent with our public duty and our high trust, nor any thing more likely to disturb the harmonious relations of the States, in all affairs of business and life, than for Congress to abandon all care and control over the currency, and to throw the whole money system of the country into the hands of four and twenty State Legislatures.

I am, then, sir, for a Bank; and am fully persuaded that to that measure the country must come at last.

The question, then, is between the creation of a Bank, and the rechartering of the present Bank, with modifications. I have already referred to the scheme for a new Bank, proposed to the Legislature of Massachusetts by Mr. White. Between such a new Bank as his propositions would create, and a rechartering of the present Bank, with modifications, there is no very wide, certainly no irreconcilable difference. We cannot, however, create another Bank before March, 1836.—This is one reason for preferring a continuance of the present. And, treating the subject as a practical question, and looking to the state of opinion, and to the probability of success, in either attempt, I incline to the opinion that the true course of policy is to propose a recharter of the present Bank, with modifications.

As to what these modifications should be, I would only now observe that, while it may well be inferred, from my known sentiments, that I should not myself deem any alterations in the charter, beyond those proposed by the bill of 1832, highly essential; yet it is a case, in which, I am aware, nothing can be effected for the good of the country, without making some approaches to unity of opinion. I think, therefore, that in the hope of accomplishing an object of so much importance, liberal concessions should be made. I lay out of the case all consideration of any especial claim, or any legal right of the present stockholders, to a renewal of their charter. No such right can be pretended, doubtless none such is pretended. The stockholders must stand like other individuals, and their interest regarded so far, and so far only, as may be judged for the public good. Modifications of the present charter, should, I think be prepared, such as may remove all reasonable grounds of jealousy, in all quarters; whether in States, in other institutions, or in individuals.—Such, too, as may tend to reconcile the interests of the great city where the Bank is, with those of another great city; and, in short, the question should be met with a sincere disposition to accomplish, by united and friendly counsels, a measure which shall allay fears, and promote confidence, at the same time that it secures to the country a sound, creditable, and uniform currency; and to the Government a safe deposit for the public treasure, and an important auxiliary in its financial operations.

I repeat, then, sir, that I am in favor of renewing the charter of the present Bank, with such alterations as may be expected to meet the general sense of the country.

And now, Mr. President, to avoid all unfounded inferences, I wish to say, that these suggestions are to be regarded as wholly my own. They are made without the knowledge of the bank, and with no understanding or concert with any of its friends. I have not understood, indeed, that the Bank itself proposes to apply, at present, for a renewal of its charter. Whether it does so or not, my suggestions are connected with no such or any other purpose of the Bank. I take up the subject on public grounds purely and exclusively.

And, Sir, in order to repel all inferences of another sort, I wish to state, with equal distinctness, that I do not undertake to speak the sentiments of any individual, heretofore opposed to the Bank, or belonging to that class of public men, who have generally opposed it. I state my own opinions; if others should concur in them, it will be only because they approve them, and will not be the result of any previous concert or understanding whatever.

Finally, Mr. President, having stated my own opinions, I respectfully ask those who propose to continue the discussion now going on, relative to the Deposits, to let the country see their plan for the final settlement of the present difficulties. If they are against the Bank, and against all Banks, what do they propose? That the country will not be satisfied with the present state of things, seems to me certain. What state of things is to succeed it? To these questions, I desire to call, earnestly, the attention of the Senate, and of the country.—The occasion is critical; the interests at stake momentous; and, in my judgment, Congress ought not to adjourn till it shall have passed some law, suitable to the exigency, and satisfactory to the country.

From the Louisville Herald, Jan. 14.

The following correspondence passed between the Hon. John Rowan, and a committee of citizens of this place, by whom he was invited to preside at the meeting on Saturday last:—

LOUISVILLE. Jan. 9th, 1834.

To the Hon. John Rowan—

SIR: It is contemplated to have a meeting of the citizens of Louisville, on Saturday next, to take into consideration the propriety of the late removal of the public moneys from the Bank of the United States.—It is the general wish, that you, sir, should act on that occasion as chairman. In obedience to that wish, we have been delegated by the committee of arrangement to request, that you will act; and we trust, sincerely, that it will suit your convenience to meet the public desire and expectation on this subject.

With high respect, &c.

THOMAS F. MARSHALL,
W. TANNEHILL,
J. B. BLAND,
GEO. KEATS,
WILLIAM REAY,

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 11, 1834.

Gentlemen: Your note of the 9th inst., expressing it to be the wish of the citizens of Louisville, and of yourselves, (representing them in that particular) that I should act as Chairman of a meeting, which they contemplate holding on this day, to take into consideration the propriety of the late removal of the Public money from the Bank of the United States, was received by me on last evening, upon my return from the country. Too much indisposed then to attend to its contents, I hasten now to express, in reply, the deep regret with which I feel constrained to decline the very flattering solicitation.

The motives which influence me, are peculiarly and emphatically personal and private; they will not, I hope, be misinterpreted by my fellow citizens of Louisville. In reference to the subject of the contemplated meeting, I have no wish to conceal my sentiments. I have never been friendly, as it is well known by my friends, to the charter of the Bank of the United States. I always considered, that, as a moneyed power, it might be dangerous to liberty; and I rejoiced when the Bill rechartering it was vetoed by the President. But, since the promulgation, by the President, of his Proclamation, and the enaction, by the Congress, of the Force Bill, it remained only to unite the Purse of the People with the Sword in the hand of the Executive, to consummate their vassalage, in theory at least—and liberty seldom long exists practically, after it has ceased theoretically. The events of the last year, if they shall be sanctioned by the people, will leave, in my humble opinion, little worthy of the care of freemen. Those events stand thus—First, the Proclamation obliterates the Federative charter of the Government, and asserts for it consolidated identity. Secondly—The Force Bill arms the President with the power of enforcing the assertions of his Proclamation, according to the tenor, or caprice of his own discretion. And, lastly, his disposal of the public moneys, by their removal from the Bank of the United States, leaves nothing of principle behind to be conceded by the people to him, or to be taken by him from them. The President has been badly advised. He must not be allowed, under any circumstances, to control the Treasury. That Department must belong to, and be controlled exclusively by the people of the States. I forbear to express any opinion as to the rasping effects, upon the community, of the President's new and arbitrary moneyed arrangements. I have been two little practically conversant with moneyed matters, to be able to form an opinion.

I cannot conclude this hasty and I fear crude reply to your very flattering note, without repeating the regret I feel at being obliged to forego the gratification which a compliance with your wish would, under other circumstances, afford me.

Accept for yourselves, and for those you represent, assurances of the high respect of your humble servant and fellow citizen,

JOHN ROWAN.

Another Steam Boat Disaster.—It will be seen by the following extract from the Report of the steamer Orleans, which arrived here this morning, that the steamer Telegraph, from this port for Bayou Tunica, has been lost, together with the greater part of her cargo.

"On the night of the 27th inst., at 7 o'clock, in the bend near the head of the Palmyra Islands, came in contact with the steamer Telegraph, Capt. Prior. The concussion was such that she sunk in 10 minutes, in 3 1-2 fathoms water, during which time all her passengers and crew were taken on board of us.—New Orleans Courier, Nov. 31.

AN ORDINANCE

To establish the lines of the Borough, and for other purposes.

WHEREAS, in order to establish permanently the lines of the Borough of Allegheny, as well as of all the public commons, public streets, lanes, and alleys lying therein, the Council did, by an ordinance, passed the 7th day of March, eighteen hundred and thirty three, authorize a survey and plotting of all the lines of said borough; and whereas, James Sterrett, recording regulator, has submitted a plot or plan of the borough, together with a book of specifications describing minutely the length and bearing of the boundary lines of the borough, and also the lines of the public streets, lanes, and alleys lying therein, which plat or plan, and book of specifications, are signed by James Sterrett, recording regulator, and dated the 14th day of January, 1834; and whereas, the said plat or plan and specifications are approved by the burgess and council—

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the Burgess and Council of Allegheny, That in order properly to identify and authenticate said plat or plan, together with the accompanying book of specifications, it shall be the duty of the Town Clerk to affix his attestation and the seal of the corporation to the said plat or plan and book of specifications, and carefully preserve the same among the records of the borough.

SEC. 2. That the lines designated in said plat or plan and book of specifications, shall govern and be strictly adhered to and complied with in all regulations that may be made by the borough regulators.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the special duty of the recording regulators and each of them, as well as of the street commissioners, to inform the burgess in any case where, to their knowledge, or the knowledge of either, any person or persons holding possession, or are about to take possession of any public ground lying within the borough, but outside of the lines designated in the said plat or plan and book of specifications, and it shall be the duty of the burgess, when so informed, to proceed forthwith, according to law, in the name of the corporation, against all persons holding possession, or about to take possession of such public ground—Provided, That in case of doubt, the Burgess may suspend proceedings until directed by the Council, to whom he shall submit the case at its next meeting.

Ordained and enacted into a law, the 14th day of January, A. D. 1834.

JOHN TASSEY,
President of the Council.

BRADDOCK'S FIELD

Edgeworth Young Ladies' Seminary.

ANOTHER year, the seventh of this Institution, has terminated, under circumstances pleasing in the retrospect, and replete with successful result.

In taking leave of those young ladies whose allotted time has expired, the relation of teacher and pupil of course ceases, but feelings of kindness, and desire for friendly intercourse, with mutual prosperity, will ever exist.

Health, the first of earthly blessings, has been so extraordinary, as to make Braddock's Field proverbial as a place for its enjoyment; and the additional buildings and arrangements have given satisfaction to all. We therefore announce, with gratitude, the prosperity of the Institution, in the present public manner.

On the 18th proximo, (September) it is intended to resume the engagements of the Seminary, but with a limited number.

It is intended, that, except as vacancies occur, no more pupils shall be received the next session, than those whose names remain on the list, or who are considered as engaged. This arrangement, it is presumed, will receive the approval of our friends.

The same course of studies will be pursued as particularized in former notices—and the terms continue unaltered, viz.

Pupilage, with reference to all the English branches, $150
Tuition in Music and Drawing, 50
No extras but washing and stationery.

YOUNG LADIES' SELECT SCHOOL.

MRS. CROSBY has removed her School to No. 62 Fourth street, in the building adjoining the one which she recently occupied. The increasing patronage with which she has been favored, induces her to flatter herself that her efforts as a teacher have been successful in advancing the interest of her pupils, and in gaining the approbation of their friends.

Mrs. C. gives instruction in the common and higher branches of English Study, in a thorough and extensive course of Mathematics; in the Ancient and Modern Languages, and in Ornamental Needlework, Drawing, and Painting, &c.

For further particulars, application can be made to the teacher, at the school room, or at her residence, No. 138 Liberty street.

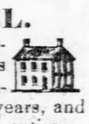
LOUISVILLE HOTEL.



THIS new and splendid establishment, situated on Main street, has been leased of the Louisville Hotel Company by the subscribers, for a term of years, and they feel no hesitation in saying that the entire arrangement of this Hotel, for extent of accommodation, elegance, and comfort, are not surpassed by any Hotel in the United States. Its location is pleasant and airy, and but a few moments' walk from the steam boats. The house contains nearly 200 apartments, most of which have fire places; and has a private entrance, leading to thirty suits of rooms, expressly arranged for the accommodation of families—has also seventy single lodging rooms. The establishment is furnished in the best modern style, and the Wines and Liquors have been selected with great care from the most celebrated vaults in New York and Boston. The proprietors, grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed on the different establishments they have been connected with in the eastern cities, hope, by their experience and personal attention, to gain for this Hotel a reputation equal to any in America. The Hotel was opened for the reception of transient and permanent boarders on the 1st of December.

FAIRBANK'S PLATFORM SCALES.

THESE scales are constructed upon an improved principle; are fitted up with great care by the manufacturers, and warranted to weigh with accuracy from half a pound to 12,000. Being placed in, and forming part of, the floor, the process of weighing is performed with ease and facility, while the space they occupy may be improved as a passage way or for other purposes.

The construction of these scales is such that they are little liable to derangement of wear, and their perfect operation will be guaranteed for any reasonable length of time.

The usual objection, that a new method of weighing cannot be safely entrusted to unskilful hands, is obviated by the use of the improved Balance, concerning which are the following remarks in the Journal of the Franklin Institute, of the state of Pennsylvania, for the promotion of the Mechanic Arts, for June, 1833. (Edited by Thos. P. Jones, M. D., late Superintendent of the Patent Office, at Washington, Professor of Mechanics in the Franklin Institute, &c.

"The Messrs. Fairbanks, some time since, obtained a patent for a Platform Weighing Machine, and this mode of adjuating and graduating the Beam of the Balance, and the weights, was devised by them with a view to its employment with the before mentioned machine. We have had an opportunity of examining one of their balances, and have been much pleased with it: this examination, however, was not necessary to the conviction that it possesses a just claim to the character of a real improvement, the whole arrangement being so simple as to enable any person to perceive that it is well adapted to the purpose contemplated, that of facilitating the business of weighing, and more especially of heavy articles."

The subscriber, as Agent, will receive orders for the above Scales, which will be made in this city to order. They can be seen at his Warehouse, No. 84, Front street.

DOCTOR ROBERT'S
☞WELCH MEDICAMENTUM☜

FOR the cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, Cholic, Fever and Ague, Dysentery, Headach, Loss of Appetite, Flatulence, Hypochondria, Hysterics, Dropsical Complaints, and Heartburn, It also prevents all Bilious disorders, and removes habitual Costiveness, Asthma, Strangury, Gravel, Rheumatism, Gout, and Impurities of the Blood.

A person who uses this Medicamentum will not require the use of the lancet, or any means of the healing art. It restores and revives the animal spirits, invigorates the system, removes nervous tremors, obtunds rheumatic and anthritic pains, and prevents their return. It cleanses the stomach of all morbid humors, which cause indigestion, acidities, headach, and lowness of spirits; cures all bilious disorders, and all cholics of the stomach and bowels, almost immediately; inspires cheerfulness; gives comfort to the dropsical; takes away palpitation of the heart; gives circulation to the blood; restores bloom to the sallow or sickly cheek, and plumpness to the meagre habit; purges without pain, and banishes all cause of fever of every kind. It acts on the stomach, that great reservoir of the human system, a diseased state of which causes all diseases. No alteration in the usual habits of life is required, but the abstaining from distilled ardent spirits.

CERTIFICATE,

From Rev. Derick Lansing, D. D., Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in Utica.

UTICA, Jan. 6, 1830.

To Dr. Hitchcock.—Dear Sir: I have always been one of the number of those who have placed little confidence in nostrums or specifics, and for this reason, although I saw your advertisement of the Welch Medicamentum, I could not bring my mind to consent to use it. My sufferings, from indigestion, during the past summer, were so severe, as materially to affect my comfort; and my capacity for usefulness. I have reason to thank you, sir, that, on hearing of the state of my health, you kindly sent me your Medicamentum. I have taken it faithfully, and with entire success. I have not been visited with one of those turns of distress, which before were weekly periodical, since I began to take your valuable medicine. Could I receive the same relief which I have hitherto experienced, on condition of taking it for life, I should cheerfully comply with such condition. Your's, very truly, D. C. LANSING.

ANTI-DYSPEPTIC ELIXER.

ONE of the most agreeable and efficacious Medicines ever discovered for the permanent cure of those chronic states of derangement of the stomach, constituting that miserable disease called Dyspepsia.

The basis of this Elixer s vegetables, and perfectly innocent in its operation; it destroys that sour state of the stomach, the instant it is taken, and stops the morbid secretion, by giving strength to the muscular fibre of that important organ, by which means the peristaltic motion of the intestines is increased, and the costiveness obviated; a new action is given to the system, which puts an end to a train of distressing nervous sensations.

Another form of the disease in which the Elixer is admirably calculated to relieve, is the decline of fever, where the stomach will not bear the ordinary strengthening medicines indicated in such cases, it has the surprising effect of giving vigor, and restoring the natural secretions of the body, without increasing the febrile state. Not the least danger is to be apprehended from exposure to cold, while under the use of this medicine, nor will it interrupt necessary employment of the patient a single hour.

☞A number of cases of cures performed by the Anti-Dyspeptic Elixer in the vicinity of Pittsburgh can be given.

GEO. W. CARPENTER'S
COMPOUND SYRUP OF LIVERWORT,

A SAFE and Valuable Medicine for Coughs, Spitting of Blood, Consumption, and Liver Complaints.

Most of the medicines made use of for the above diseases are of a stimulating nature, composed generally of Resins and Balsams, in alcoholic solutions, which, although sometimes giving temporary relief, in almost every instance where they are freely used, aggravate the disease, and reduce the strength of the patient.

This article possesses superior advantages over these preparations, its action being of a tonic, invigorating and strengthening nature, thus overcoming the disease by promoting expectoration, and gradully increasing the strength of the patient, and thus, without being attended with any unpleasant effects: it also agrees with the stomach, in a cases, and is a pleasant medicine to take.
